The Exchange Problem

No one question is commanding such widespread interest in all countries as the problem of equalizing rates of international exchange. It is a problem which first engaged the attention of financiers and governments.

Soon, however, it called for the careful consideration of all mercantile houses, manufacturers, and others engaged in large enterprises doing an international business. Now it is a question concerning every individual purchase.

It has now reached that acute stage where it is influencing politics, international and domestic, and is vitally affecting all classes of business men.

The newspaper press, revision, and in private conversation it has eclipsed even discussions of the Peace Treaty and the League of Nations.

So far as Canada is concerned, our money is at a discount, practically everywhere but the United States, where it stands at a very serious discount.

British money is at a discount in both Canada and the United States, so, too, French, Italian, German and other foreign currencies.

The United States alone enjoys the distinction of having its money at a premium in all countries, while Canada comes second with its money at a discount only by the United States.

Canada has always purchased more extensively in the United States than that country has in Canada. In other words, imports from the States have always exceeded our exports to that country. On the other hand, our exports to Great Britain have always exceeded our imports from the Old Land. In former years we have, therefore, been able to dictate the exchange balance in the United States by British funds on New York; that is, we paid our debts in the States with money which Britain owed to us.

At the present time we cannot do this, however, while Great Britain and other European countries over Canada far more than this country over the United States, they are not a position to pay in cash or in securities to the United States, because we have been forced to sell to them on credit on the one hand, and on the other they, too, have the States' large sums in excess of what the States owe them.

So far as we, while waiting for that time when Europe will be able to pay Canada what it owes us, we must pay the United States what we owe it either in gold or goods. In the three years 1917, 1918 and 1919 Canada bought goods from the United States to a total of one billion dollars, in excess of the value of the goods sold by us to the States. Notwithstanding these debts we have to pay the United States, the American Exchange National Bank of New York estimates that Canada has a favorable balance with the whole world of over $500,000,000.

In the meantime, and until Canada can collect from other countries, there is only one of two ways, or a combination of the two, which can right her balance with the United States. (1) By buying less from the United States than in the past, and buying more at home and from Great Britain, France and other countries, so as to reduce the amount of Canadian dollars which the United States will buy from us, and energetically proceeding to sell such goods across the line.

The fact is that the Canadian dollar has a purchasing power which is only 80 or 85 cents in the United States will, in itself, operate to discourage Canadian buying there, while the fact that our dollar will buy more than twice as much of a man's worth of goods in Great Britain, France and other countries, will also help the other hand. From the purely Canadian point of view, the main thing is that our people should produce in ever increasing volume those things which are in demand in the United States and which we can most easily and profitably export to that country.

At the same time, the Ottawa Government would be well advised at the approaching session of Parliament if it loses no time in adopting the policy of a tariff on imports, as urged by the farmers of the West and to increase the preference accorded to British goods under the tariff to fifty per cent. This would greatly assist Great Britain, and, in addition, help the Canadian farmer. The only thing to do, however, is to support the Canadian farmer, and the best thing is that our people should produce in ever increasing volume those things which are in demand in the United States and which we can most easily and profitably export to that country.

Close American observers of conditions are becoming alarmed over the prospect of losing a considerable part of the Canadian business market.

The best business in the United States has—and leading financial men there are urging adoption of a policy which will have the effect of raising the value of the Canadian dollar across the line.

Canada, however, should not depend on United States action, but should by hard work and unremitting energy increase production in all lines, and, in addition, expand our export trade to the United States, so as to replace all implements of production, coupling therewith a larger tariff preference to British goods.

Large Timber Deal

Half a Million Dollars Said to Be Involved in the Trans-sation.

The largest timber deal of the year has just been completed, says the Vancouver Province, in the purchase Messrs. Bleedel, Welch and Stewart of a considerable tract on Vancouver Island, the head of Ucluelet Bay. Half a million dollars is said to have been the price paid, but officials of the purchasing firm declined to announce the definite figure.

The timber tract, which is 100 miles from the coast, consists of 6,000 acres, and the fir and cedar timber available is said to average 40,000 feet per acre. It is a railway proposition, and three miles of line will be put in to transport the logs to the coast. The new camp is almost opposite Myrtle Point, on the east side of the Gulf of Georgia, and the same camp has been in continuous use on a large logging enterprise.

The Disappointing Peace

This is not the peace which I sustained us through the dark days of the war. The new world that we thought we were making then is still unformed; the spirit of international rivalry and competition is still a salient trait; and instead of a world animated by the ideal of common good, we have a world, partly divided by the rivalry between the freely opposing principles of communism, progress and paternal tyranny, partly divided in an indifference towards this issue which it cannot really feel, and indulging the offshoots of political isolation that broke down so completely during the war.

A good many moving spectacles are due to heartless landlords.

A Question of Public Interest

Have the People of Canada the Right to Buy Their Own Lumber at Reasonable Prices?

The Regina Grain Growers' association held a meeting on Saturday last called for the purpose of getting lumber prices, and in the legislature on Monday, during the discussion of the housing scheme, the minister of Municipal Affairs declared that Canadian lumbermen were being discriminated against because of the fact that United States buyers were outbidding each other, regardless of price, for British Columbia's output, with the natural result that the provincial consumers had to pay exorbitant prices and go elsewhere for lumber.

It is the desire of the lumbermen to have a large advance in price,

but the Minister of Municipal Affairs has said that lumbermen must be content with what they get.

The lumber producer consequently is not free to demand

what he wants, but from lack of ability.

Australian lumbermen are forced to buy what they need in Vladivostok, for the reason that British Columbia cannot fill their orders."

She controlled herself, but when she spoke again her voice had lost and she was silent. "I can't tell you, Mr. Elden, but I must tell you—I took—let me give you some money for my things, said maybe I was short of money, and want to buy some new clothes—and he would pay me extra, in advance—and he would give me dollars—and—I spent it!"

She turned with all the force of the last words on his head and, with the last words, a sharp, sharp strike. When he returned to where Miss Wardin was, his face was clenched and the veins stood out on the back of his neck. "I'm sorry," he muttered, "I'm sorry. And I have been tried to him. I have let him blind me, and I have lost my standards; I have let him weigh the coal. Well, now I know it. There was a time when I was frightened even Gladys Wardin, well though she knew the men was not to be trusted."

"Here," he said, taking some bills from his pocket. "You must tell him you must return his money; I will lend you what you need. Don't be afraid."

"But I can't take your money, either, Mr. Elden," she protested. "I can't tell him where I got it, and I have no job, and I can't pay you back. You see I can't take it even from him, that's a fool I was! For a few clothes—"

"You will continue to work for me?"

She shook her head. "No, I can't. I can't work anywhere near him."

Conrad was about to speak again when he was dissolved by a noise. I have always felt that there was something that wouldn't stand test, something that wouldn't stand test. I thought it was in his business life; and I thought it was in his life to give the answer. Now I know."

There was the sound of a key in the street door, and Conrad opened

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

Conrad's partner entered the room. He had evidently not expected to find Elden there, but after a moment he turned and spoke to him directly.

"Almost ready, Miss Wardin?" he asked. "The time has gone."

He took his watch from his pocket and consulted it.

David Wardin was on the giddy moment, she would fight for herself and for the man she loved, her partner. Her answer reassured him.

"Why, what does this mean?"

"It's your money, Will you take it, please?"

"No, I won't take it, until you explain."

She opened her fingers, and the bill fell to the floor. "All right, she said.

Conrad's eyes had shifted to Dave. "You are at the bottom of this, Elden," he said. "What does it mean?"

"It means, Conrad," Dave answered, and then he stopped.

"It means that after all these years I have discovered what a cur you are—just to bank you, at least in this instance."

Conrad flushed, but he maintained an air of nonchalance. "You've been drinking, Dave," he said. "I meant no harm to Miss Wardin."

"David, you call a liar a wolf as well as a cur!"

The word cut them. Conrad was mad, but he was calm. "Now, if God I won't take that from any man," he shouted, and with a swing of his arms Dave made no motion, and Conrad shortly brought his coat back to position.

"I was right," said Dave, calmly. "You would not fight. You think you're a man, but you're not. Well—it's better world protection."

"I will leave," said Miss Wardin. "I will leave, but I will not go alone."

"You girls were not here," Conrad protested. "I will not fight."

"'O, I will leave,'" said Miss Wardin. "I will leave, but I will not go alone."

"I will not let you leave," he said. "Just because you're a girl."

"I will leave, but I will not go alone."

Hart-Davison

Married, at the Pro-Cathedral, Calgary, on Tuesday, February 17, by the Very Rev. Dean Page: Emma M. Davison, of Burk's Falls, Ontario, to W. O. Hart, of Claresholm, Alberta.

To those who are particularly interested in church union the service of Sunday evening certainly left very little to wish for. The sermon was one such as we do not hear every day. The music was worth hearing out. The service carried with it the spirit of union which is growing so rapidly these days. At many points a pin could have been heard drop except for the pastor's quiet voice. If there were differences which have kept the churches apart could he drop them? who can tell but the cause for which they all work might not materialize in this generation.

Billy Oswald at the Rex Next Friday

Divine services Sunday, March 10th, at 10:30 a.m. o'clock, and at Clear Lake school, 3 o'clock. Special address to young people in the English language at the morning service. The Y. P. S. will meet at the church Sunday, 7:30 p.m.

The many local admirers of Billy Oswald will be delighted to know that the exuberantly funny Scot is to favor us with a visit on next Friday night, March 12th, at the Rex Theater, in his usual laughing success, "I Love a Laugh."

It is announced that Mr. Oswald's present production is a decided innovation, in that, while it contains a number of the usual musical numbers it has a closely woven plot, which is just bubbling over with laughs and funny scenes. Of course no opportunity is missed for the inimitable "Billy" being cast for a role that allows him unlimited scope to display his exceptional ability as a comedian.

Mr. Oswald's supporting company is colled to be by far the best that has ever surrounded the comedian, each artist having been chosen for his or her ability to get the most out of the parts assigned them. Among the well known members of the cast are Beatrice Carman, Patsy Salmon, Phyllis Hughes, George Chapman, Sherold Paige James, Whitehouse and Robert Tait.

We have just solved the problem of Church Union. If our Health Board would just keep one of our preachers in quarantine we might have even more delightful services such as we had last Sabbath. We have nothing whatever against either of our preachers, they are both good men and we have nothing if we have ever had any better, but it would really pay well to engage our medical practitioner to feed them alternately with medicine and keep them apart from each other in quarantine; or it might be wiser to keep them both busy in pastoral visiting and still have union services on the Sunday, can make a good service.

With such a plan as this the minister would put his best effort in one sermon and the worshipper would be relieved the monotony of listening to the same voice twice on the same day.

Last Sunday's services were ideal. Under the able leadership and accompaniment of Mr. W. G. Mottoff, the singing church beat all record marks. The leader of the Methodist choir, Mr. W. Hillerud, generously took a place with the singers, and his superb tenor voice was easily recognized in the audience. The singing throughout the service was well balanced and there was no lack of good soloists in any of the parts.

A crowded church made an inspiring congregation and the preacher was naturally at his best, and preached a most practical and impressive sermon.

The work of the congregation no one could tell the Presbyterian from the Methodist or the Methodist from the Anglican. They were all dressed much alike and they all sang heartily in the service. The only difference one could see was that in the morning service, which was held in the Presbyterian church, the "Amen" was sung at the end of the hymn, while in the evening service which was held in the Methodist church they all sat down before they had finished (the "Amen" was omitted in both books alike). Even this difference has its lesson, for it is the willingness to compromise on these little unessential matters that will make church union possible.

In the distant future there will be in Claresholm a beautiful church edifice with comfortable seats, a pipe organ and a choir section, and the people a church in which harmony and good will shall never prevail. We would like to see in our day, but meanwhile we are thankful to the "Amen" for helping us for a few Sundays what narrowness and ancient prejudice at present deny us.

Monday, March 15th. Finally Settled for Leslie Grossmith at Claresholm

On account of "flu" and bad weather Mr. Leslie Grossmith has been obliged to postpone his tour to the coast, but will appear in Claresholm at the I. O. O. F. Hall, on Monday, March 15th, without fail. At the concert, Miss Marguerite Hill, a charming young lady with a beautiful soprano voice, a soprano in popular songs and Marguerite has prepared many new numbers and sketches for his programme. The select dance which follows will have the best music in the country and it will be wise to secure tickets well in advance and in that way help the local funds.
